VOL. 59 — NO. 28

Award Contract For Foundation Borings, To Determine Location Of Bay Toll Bridge, Today

Observations...

By the Editor

To our friend, Leo Kenney, may we suggest that you change the location of the sign on your lot at Dunbar and the Highway. It is a little close to the highway and obstructs the view. It may eventually cause an accident and certainly you would not want this. It can be moved back and still serve your purpose. Sometime ago we called attention to the fact that the majority of the parking spaces on the beach were being occupied practically all day by the owners of the business places or by their employees. This leaves very little space for the customers. Give it some thought, may mean more business for you.

Bill Colmer's column, "Congressional Sidelights" gives some very interesting data on the tenure of office of our congressmen, and by the way, we do want to extend our belated congratulations to Bill. This is the second time in nine terms he has had no opposition. Bill, as we see it is an outstanding member of Congress and one of the few statesmen in this great legislative body. Several buttons popped off our shirt when we answered a call from Los Angeles, Calif., from Fred Ansley, a former resident of Bay St. Louis, and one of our subscribers making inquiry as to why he had not received his paper for the last four weeks. We explained to him that probably in the rush of new subscriptions during our contest, and with his change of address, we had failed to cut a new stencil and that his old one was probably removed. Boy, it certainly makes us feel good, when our subscribers are so interested in the Echo. The four back issues have gone to Fred and we are going to try our level best to see that he doesn't miss another issue.

Driving along the Beach last Sunday we observed 12 cars, all bearing licenses from the States of Tennessee, Louisiana, Alabama, Illinois and Texas, without the presence of one Mississippi license. Folks are coming here and we certainly should have more to offer them. One thing we could offer them is a cleaner beach, and too, with a little cooperation perhaps a few spots of sand beaches where they could enjoy God's greatest gift to us. The death of Judge Curtis Waller was a shock to us and to his many friends in Bay St. Louis. Colonel was a lovable character, full of wit and humor. One for whom we had a great admiration. During the years he practiced law in Bay St. Louis we were happy to have been able to consider him our friend and to have served under him when he was commander of a local National Guard company. It was in this capacity one was able to observe the real man. Curtis Waller was a good lawyer, a great personality, loyal and sincere. Mississippi and his adopted State of Florida have sustained a great loss. We join with his many friends in extending to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy.

Mrs. Joseph Kern, the progressive owner of the 5 and 10 has embellished her building with a colorful awning covering the front of her building. The installation was handled by the Seaboard Supply Company of Bay St. Louis. Hancock County went over the top in the Independence Drive for the sale of "E" bonds as reported by the Federal Reserve Bank. The report as of July 8th, showed a total of 100.59 of our quota reached.

Three persons suffered minor injuries early Sunday in a one-vehicle accident about six miles west of Bay St. Louis on US Highway 90, according to Assistant Patrol Inspector, J. J. Wittmann, investigating officer. He identified the injured as Harold J. Berry, driver of the car, New Orleans, La.; Windham, both shock and bruises; and Myra Lee Windham, fractured jaw and cuts and bruises. They were treated at the King's Daughters hospital in Bay St. Louis. The officer said the automobile, a 1950 Ford, sustained damages estimated at $1,200.

"We Are In The Third Agricultural Phase" Simmons Tells Bay Rotary

"We are in what agriculturists call or refer to as the third phase of the agricultural program," Howard S. Simmons, County Agent, stated in his address before the Bay St. Louis Rotary club Wednesday.

The first phase began with the discovery of the New World and lasted until after 1900, and such time as there was no more new land to migrate to, Mr. Simmons added. When the migration ended the second phase or period, known as the commercial fertilizer period, of the agricultural program began. Commercial fertilizer producers began a "terrific" advertising campaign which led the farmer to believe that he had only to use the product and his crop was made. This continued, the County Agent noted, for 25 years until it became evident that the soil was being badly damaged and the crop burned up for a lack of a balanced soil conservation and fertilization program.

THIRD PHASE BEGINS

With the continuation of this condition, the third phase began in 1935 with the passage of the Agricultural Conservation Act, one of President Roosevelt's New Deal programs, and one which, even though numerous changes have been made in the 15 years since 1935, was our first step toward a scientific farming based on the slogan "Each Acre is Land to its Adapted Use."

9,000 ACRES IN CULTIVATION

Hancock County has over 300,000 acres of land with 62,000 in farms. Of the 62,000 in farms, approximately 9,000 acres are in cultivation. "Forestry is our most important enterprise grossing over $800,000 in 1949," Mr. Simmons stated. He said that today perhaps our greatest economic and patriotic opportunity lies in our tree-growing lands, and opportunity greater than others which we recognize and struggle to grasp, and one which will pay off in our own life time.

ANSWERS TO FOREST PROBLEM

Hancock County has enough tree growing lands to meet all commercial needs as well as provide all other human benefits forthcoming from this area, in addition to contributing to the National Welfare—but these forest lands are not in full production. The only answers to solving this problem lies in protection from uncontrolled forest fires, insects and disease; intensive management including wise cutting methods; replacing where necessary; and replenishing understocked stands.

DAIRYING IS SECOND

Dairying, Mr. Simmons said, brings the second largest income to the county with the gross proceeds for 1949 exceeding $600,000. This amount, he added, "was divided among 166 farm families who produced milk commercially." During the past winter, Hancock County had over 1200 acres in improved pasture which is a large percent of the 9,000 acres in cultivation.

SHOWS PASTURE SLIDES

During the course of his talk, Mr. Simmons showed slides of various pastures in the county. He showed a field of White Dutch clover on Cornelius T. Favre's farm just above Kiln; a field of White Dutch clover on Johnson Shaw's farm in Sellers Community and Paul Bounds' White Dutch clover field. He also showed a slide of a field of Crimson clover which is a new crop that fits into the year round grazing program. This offers great hope for raising the farm income through better balanced crop-livestock farming.

Beef cattle, principally range type, runs third in income in the county with hogs fourth and poultry fifth. Truck crops, which could be near the top, Mr. Simmons said, are near the bottom. In fact, he said, most of the crop production is on the Pearl River county line.

Fifteen years after the New Deal agencies to help farmers were organized, the farmer has at his services the County Agent, who is charged with educational and promotional work; the Production and Marketing Administration, which distributes funds for approved soil building practices, takes soil samples on participating farms and also handles Marketing Quota and Commodity Credit Corporation, Price Support and Loan Program activities; the Soil Conservationist who actually maps the farm and gives technical assistance from the soil standpoint and the Farmers Home Administration, a lending agency where the doors of credit otherwise are closed to the farmer.

"You recall," Mr. Simmons stated, "I mentioned the second phase of the agricultural program as the third period when commercial fertilizer made its entry. Today, with the technical assistance available from the various agricultural agencies and the improvement in the fertilizers, the farmer is in a very good position. In fact, it is possible to bring the most barren lands into production, to maintain the productivity of fertile soils and to raise the crop-producing capacities of all soils to higher levels. An example of this is corn in Hancock County. The average for this county is 16 bushels per acre. Last year Webb Welborn, 4-H Club boy in the Leetown community made 101 bushels on an acre. He used a hybrid corn and a recommended balanced fertilizer formula based on information from the soil samples sent to the State Soil Testing Laboratory."

In conclusion, Mr. Simmons gave a resume of what 1950 will bring for the farmer. Mr. Simmons was invited to talk before the Rotary by Octave Delph, program chairman for the day.

Judge Curtis Longino Waller, 63, of the United States fifth circuit court of appeals, died Tuesday, July 12, in Tallahassee, Fla., following an illness of one month. Physicians said his death resulted from an accident to the blood vessels of the brain.

Judge Waller a native of Silver Creek, Miss., was a former resident of Bay St. Louis where he practiced law. He represented Hancock County in the Mississippi Legislature in 1924. That year he moved to Florida and established a law practice in Tallahassee.

The noted jurist attended Mississippi college and Millsaps. Prior to his arrival in Bay St. Louis, Judge Waller served as secretary to the late Senator Pat Harrison for four years.

He formed a law partnership with Millard Caldwell, former governor of Florida, and in 1930 with Senator Claude Pepper. This partnership lasted until 1937 when Pepper began his service in the US Senate. He became active in Florida politics and in 1933 he was elected to the Florida Legislature. He did not run for reelection.

His appointment as federal district judge came in 1940, and in 1943 he was elevated to the circuit court of appeals.

Judge Waller's ready wit was often found in the decisions handed down in his court; he heard many cases in New Orleans during the past seven years. He was one of the six judges on the circuit court.

The jurist was an avid sportsman and a number of articles written by him on fishing were accepted by sports magazines.

He is survived by his wife, the former Lucy McGinn of Bay St. Louis; a daughter; his mother, Mrs. William Mikell Waller, Prentiss, Miss., who celebrated her 100th birthday on February 14; a brother Dr. Benjamin Sylvanus Waller of Silver Creek, Miss.; and three sisters, Mrs. Leon Tyrone, Mrs. Dolphus Leon Batson and Mrs. Wilburn D. Hilton of Prentiss.

Funeral services were held in Tallahassee, with burial there.

Jackson, Miss., July 12—Contracts for foundation borings to determine location of the $4,500,000 concrete toll bridge across Bay St. Louis will be awarded here Friday by the state highway commission.

The commission said that it will contract for similar borings in East and West Pascagoula river to determine subsurface conditions there for new bridges at those points on United States Highway 90.

Three Yacht Clubs Built Here In Bay St. Louis Within 60 Years

In a period of sixty years, Bay St. Louis and Waveland have had three yacht clubs. In 1890, the first Bay-Waveland Yacht club was organized and it was destroyed by the storm in 1909; the second was built in 1922, and it was liquidated during the time of the panic in 1929; the third club was started in 1949.

It was the custom, in the days gone by, to hold annual regattas during the month of July; once again, Bay St. Louis will be the scene of the annual Bay-Waveland Yacht Club Regatta when the general warning gun is fired at 1:30 p. m. Saturday, July 15.

On May 20, 1922, the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club was reorganized following a period of inactivity of 13 years following the storm of 1909. The club, located on the corner of Front and Washington street, was opened with a formal reception and dance.

Ernest J. Leonhard was the first commodore; Edgar M. Roa, vice-commodore; E. V. Richards, Jr. rear-commodore; Bernard C. Shields, 1st vice-president; Emile J. Lacoste, treasurer; R. W. Webb, secretary; H. S. Reishaw, chairman of the house committee; C. S. Matthews, chairman of the athletic committee; George R. Rea, chairman of the finance committee; Rev. H. Perry, chairman of the golf committee; L. H. Burns, chairman of the yachting committee; John Osolnach, chairman of the membership committee; Charles G. Moreau, chairman of the publicity committee; Dr. C. L. Horton, fleet surgeon; and George J. Toca, active assistant secretary.

Only members could attend any event at the Yacht club, and if a guest was present they had to have special cards for them after their names had been sent in and passed on by the special committee formed for this purpose.

E. J. Lacoste, Sr., succeeded Mr. Leonhard as commodore, and John Edwards was commodore in 1927. In 1928 Mr. Lacoste was re-elected.

In 1926 the Bay-Waveland Yacht club entertained 10,000 people at various outings. During this one season they solicited vacationers from among the employees of D. H. Holmes Co., the New Orleans Public Service and the Hibernia Bank.

Activities of the old Yacht Club included dances, card parties and other forms of entertainment similar to those of the club today.

"The club," John Edwards said, "was popular as long as people had money."

It was dissolved in 1929, and until 1949 Bay St. Louis and Waveland were without a Yacht club, then last year John Bell instigated a movement to reorganize. On November 1, 1949, the grand opening of the $50,000 Bay-Waveland Yacht club was held.

Officers for the year 1949-50 are John Bell, commodore; Charles A. Breath, Jr., vice-commodore; Robert L. Camors, Rear-Commodore; J. J. Kelleher, secretary; John J. McDonald, treasurer; and Dr. Marion J. Wolfe, fleet surgeon. Members of the governing board are John Bell, Charles A. Breath, Jr., E. M. Brignac, Robert L. Camors, N. L. Carter, Lucien M. Gex, J. J. Kelleher, H. W. LeTissier, John J. McDonald, L. K. Nicholson, E. N. Spence and Dr. M. J. Wolfe.

J. A. Weintrauer is chairman of the fish class committee with C. A. Breath, Jr. and David McDonald.

June Breath is chairman of the Skipperette committee; Virginia Seal, vice-chairman; and Yvonne Claiborne, secretary-treasurer.

The House Committee is composed of E. N. Spence, chairman, E. M. Brignac, N. L. Carter, H. W. LeTissier and Dr. Wolfe.

Junior officers are Marion J. Wolfe, Jr., commodore; Virginia Seal, vice-commodore; Rita Boh, secretary; and Harvey Cole, treasurer.

Mrs. A. M. Trastour is club manager.

Guns will be fired on scheduled time for the annual regatta to be held Saturday, July 15, regardless of whether or not there are any entries in that class. In case the race program is delayed by the race committee a second warning salute of two guns will be fired ten minutes prior to the preparatory gun for the next class after delay signal is hoisted.

Trophies will be awarded to the winning boat in each class. If seven or more boats compete in any class, a second place trophy will be awarded in that class.

The race program can be found elsewhere in this paper.

Awarding of the contracts will be the first step in construction of the toll structures along Highway 90 out of revenue bonds to be issued by the highway commission and retired by tolls on the bridges.

Eleven borings will be made between Bay St. Louis and Henderson Point to determine the subsurface conditions necessary to the design of foundations for the proposed bridge. Each boring will be capped to a depth of 125 feet below mean tide.

The proposed locations of the borings will follow the line of the present wooden bridge across the bay and will be made at points just yards away from the present bridge foundations.

The borings are laid out, the department announcement said, contemplating the use of present points of entry to the bridge at the Bay St. Louis side and at the Henderson Point side.

Commissioner John D. Smith of the Southern highway district, declared that the borings may not be the exact location of the bridge, but give a good indication of where it will be.

He added that he "hoped to follow closely the present bridge, but that will depend primarily on obtaining right-of-way that we will need."

The highway department for the past several months has been conducting traffic surveys over the present Bay St. Louis bridge as well as ground surveys.

In the layout for borings at Pascagoula, four borings will be made in both the East and West rivers. The survey line of the borings, if followed, would relocate US Highway 90 from Gautier to Pascagoula approximately one-fourth mile north of its present bed.

The highway department said that at least six companies are expected to bid on the boring work.—New Orleans Times-Picayune, July 13.

The usual study, instruction and tests will continue for advancement and for attainment of merit badges. The recent reduction of the minimum age for Boy Scouts to 11 years has caused a considerable increase in the number of applicants for admission.

M. Ballard Receives Diploma from Norway for Services to Country

Marshall Ballard, retired New Orleans newspaperman, was presented a diploma from the king of Norway Wednesday, July 5, for his efforts in behalf of Norway during World War II.

Harald Wermer, Norwegian consul in New Orleans, made the presentation in a brief ceremony at the Ballard residence in the City. Mr. Ballard, retired editor of the New Orleans Item, left his sick bed for the ceremony.

The diploma signed by King Haakon VII, Wermer said, expressed appreciation of the Norwegian people for the former editor's "valuable aid... during the fight for our country's freedom."

Following the presentation, Ballard expressed what he termed his long-time admiration for the Norwegians and their representatives in the United States. "In working with them," he said, "my association always has been a happy one."

Seven other New Orleanians received awards Thursday at International House.

Clifton L. Leonard Assumes Forest Ranger Duties on July 1

Clifton L. Leonard, 25, of Meadville, Miss., is replacing T. V. Marlar as Area Ranger of the Forest Service for Hancock County.

Leonard who was graduated from Louisiana State university in June 1950, in Forestry Service, assumed his duties here July 1. The service now assigns each ranger one county.

The new ranger was reared on a farm near Meadville where his father was in the logging business all of his life. It was from this association that he got his first desire for forestry work. During the summer while he was still in high school he worked at Johnson-Manville Tile corporation in Natchez, with the forestry department of this company.

From high school he went into the Marine corps and served twenty-two months, part of this in the South Pacific. Upon his discharge, he attended Copiah-Lincoln Junior college for one year and L. S. U. forestry school for three years.

His course at the University included two weeks in orientation work, upon his graduation, in the Southeastern area. He spent a week at Hazelhurst working with other rangers and a week at Wiggins working with the District Ranger, Mr. Forrester.

He and Mrs. Leonard, who is the former Maggie Nettles of Meadville, are residing in the Dantagan apartment on Washington street. His office is temporarily located at the Knights of Columbus hall in the County Agents office.

Mr. Marlar, whom Leonard is replacing, is now ranger for Pearl River County.

NOW'S THE TIME

Lack of courage on the part of the average man throughout the world has probably been more responsible for the spread of Communism than any other factor. The countries governed by the "yes men" of Moscow are controlled by well organized minorities, which are today precipitating a third world war. Communism has spread to its proportion because of fear of the majorities to offer any opposition.

We, in this country, are not yet safe from the tenacles of this demon, and the average man pays little attention to his actions which are gradually tearing down the principles upon which this great country was founded. The desire for riches, the fear of loss of business, or of retaliation is styming a free expression of thought among those once considered a brave people. The spirit of our forefathers who fought and labored to bring this country out of a wilderness, and those of our boys, who have so valiantly given their lives in our last two wars so that we at home could continue to enjoy our many freedoms, are undoubtedly shocked by the attitude of our average man of today.

Bay St. Louis is a small community and we give little thought that through our actions we, too, lend aid by the nonchalant, attitude we assume, much of which is brought about through avarice and greed, and the fear of the loss of a little business, or of retaliation, if we should so much as express ourselves on a matter of civic or political nature.

Every day we hear all about us, of the things necessary for the advancement of Bay St. Louis, but what is being done about it? Nothing. We know, too, that opportunities to advertise our city favorably should not be overlooked, in fact we should seek them out. Yet, when they present themselves what happens? We find those chosen to do the job refusing to accept the responsibility because of fear. Fear of what? Nothing in the world but an imaginary fear of loss of business or retaliation.

We had a splendid opportunity to receive some very favorable advertising for Bay St. Louis in the Miss Hospitality contest, with many lovely girls available, but we are one of three cities in the State, so we are informed, without an entrant. Why? The answer we received from some of the business men on the committee to name the young lady to represent Bay St. Louis was that they could not afford to make a selection because they might lose some business.

In a small city, its business men are considered its leaders. This is indeed a wonderful example of leadership. Moral cowardice affords no leadership, nor does it offer a pattern of courage to our youth to fight to maintain the principles upon which our government is founded.

Differences of opinions should prevail and they should be welcomed. They serve as a balance wheel. Our business men should face situations with frankness and courage and be big enough to discuss problems confronting us without fear and personal feelings entering into it. As and when they are able to do this they will make themselves heard and shall have no fear of reprisals.

It is time to reflect and to realize that a continuance of this week-kneed attitude even in a small community offers a splendid retreat and a fertile field for those seeking our destruction.

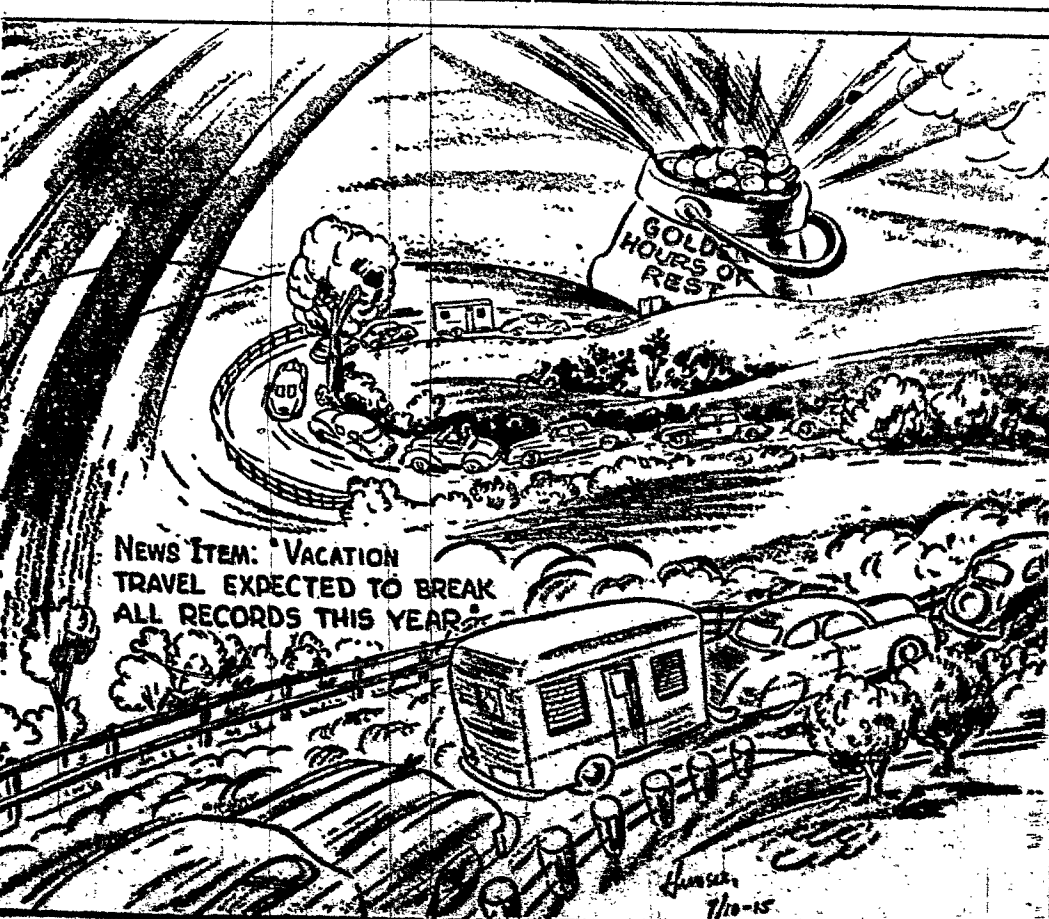

It is time for men to be men, and to afford a leadership by example; and it is time for civic pride and love of country to rise above personalities, avarice and greed.

IT IS WISE TO READ BOOKS

A Louisiana Parish has voted 44 to 1—700 to 24—to levy a tax to support the parish public library. It is the trend. People are committed to literary pursuits and entertainment and to the belief that the public library is the means for it—popular and effective, and sojourners who are here and away from their own private and public libraries. They make new acquaintances, and even friends there. There is this social feature, silent, but felt. Coast libraries realize all this, and we are gratified in having been identified with (and some help to) this very useful movement. We repeat what we often said—that "reading maketh a full man, and writing making an accurate man." We have quoted this in every school commencement editorial in this last ten pages a day of some good, solid book during vacation, and next day rapidly write (reproduce) what they read the day before, and asserted that this would be one book a month, twelve a year; and that this would improve their memory. If anyone ever has done so, we never have heard of it by letter, telephone or personal word.

A library is a mine of treasures which gives rich returns to him who holds frequent communication with books waiting upon the library shelves. They furnish the means of self-education of a kind and quality, and enthralling pleasure and rich profit. To read and be wise is to be wise and read.—Gulfport-Biloxi Daily Herald, June 26.

WMS Meets

The Womans' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church met Tuesday, July 11, for the regular Royal Service program. Mrs. W. W. Webb, president, presided at the meeting.

Mrs. Webb said that the society had cooperated with the other two churches and together they had sent a donation to the Mississippi branch of the United Council of Church Women.

Mrs. R. L. Lee and Mrs. Claiborne Lader were appointed by Mrs. Webb to select the book the society is to study; they will decide how many lessons will be held and when the study will begin.

The campaign for the collection of coupons was launched, and the losing side will be hosts to the winning side at a social hour.

The program was given by Mrs. Claude Broach, wife of the pastor of St. John's Baptist church at Charlotte, North Carolina, and Rev. R. L. Lee, pastor of the local church.

"What of Our First Hundred Years in Africa?" was the general subject under discussion. Mrs. Broach discussed the work of the Missionaries who devoted themselves to this life and how it had been received. She spoke of Livingston who was a Missionary sent to Africa, and of Stanley who was sent by the New York Herald to find Livingston. Through this contact with the Missionary, Stanley became a Christian.

Healing Strong Point in Work
Mrs. Broach reminded the group of the many lives lost in those first days of the spreading of Christianity in this almost undiscovered country. Some, however, she said, died of yellow fever, malaria and heat of the tropical sun. She also told of the health centers and leper stations and said that healing was a strong point in the work of the Missionaries. Regardless of the circumstances or how difficult the situation might be, Mrs. Broach added, the Missionaries never lost a chance to tell these people the story of Christ.

Rev. Lee followed with a talk on the situations to be met in the work and gave actual experiences of his personal friends who were doing this work there.

THE MEMBERSHIP OF CONGRESS

Four Mississippi Congressmen will be unopposed in the primaries this year, and another Representative, Washington, is retiring after serving in Congress for 25 years. We are among those re-nominated. We regard this as evidence of good will and confidence, and our one ambition is that we may continue to merit the faith and respect of the people whom we have the honor of representing in these troublesome times.

One of the first things a fellow learns here is that he is but one small cog in a tremendous big operation—one of 435. During our 9 terms in Congress we have seen 'em come and go. Of the 435 who were here on March 4, 1933, when we were sworn in, 45 remain in Congress today. And of the unusually large number—151 new members elected when we were, only 13 remain today, and no doubt several of these will drop out at the end of this year.

In the Mississippi 7-member delegation in 1933, and at the end of this year only one Mississippian will have been here longer than we have—Congressman Rankin.

Speaking of longevity of service, it is interesting to note how long the old-timers have been here. Adolph Sabath of Chicago, chairman of the Rules Committee, is dean of the House, having served since March 4, 1907—43 consecutive years. Next is Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who has been in Congress since 1911. Third is Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, now 68, who was sworn in on March 4, 1913, followed closely by Carl Vinson of Georgia, Chairman of the Armed Services Committee, who entered the following year.

A glance at these facts makes the importance of seniority self-evident. Those who have served for longer periods automatically become chairmen of their respective committees, if their party is in power. Real influence and power is wielded by committee chairmen.

So being re-elected really constitutes a promotion because it means the member moves up the ladder in rank on committees as others above him drop out, and with this increased seniority go added committee responsibilities and more recognition in other ways. The practice of the South of returning its representatives to Congress explains the fact that 11 of the 19 Chairmen of House committees are Southerners.

Noise makers don't usually get very far up here. The members who are listened to are those who are well-prepared when they speak, who are sincere and consistent in the positions they take on various issues. Members soon learn who can be depended upon for accuracy and reliability. It has been our observation that while a few bad apples show up now and then, most of the members are sincere, able, courageous, and patriotic. And if they don't measure up, the people thanks to the wisdom of the Founding Fathers, have a chance to change hired hands every two years.

About all one can do here is to keep as well informed on pending issues as possible, vote independently on issues involving principle, get along with other members, measure expenditures in terms of what is essential and what is non-essential, work hard for the welfare of one's district but try to reconcile every issue with what is best for the nation as a whole.

"Wheel-bar-overs" Walk from Jacksonville To New Orleans; Pair Leave May 13th

With her wash hanging on her wheelbarrow, Mrs. Julia Roka King St. Claire, 49 year old widow from Jacksonville, Florida, walked through Bay St. Louis Monday on her way to New Orleans.

Accompanying the graying, sun-burned mother of a daughter 32 and a 24 year old son, is her third child, eight year old Dolph. The pair left Jacksonville May 13 for New Orleans because "Dolphy" wanted to make this trip. Last year, Mrs. St. Claire pushed her son in the very same wheelbarrow she is using on this trip to carry her clothing and supplies, to Detroit, Michigan, to get material for a book called "Wheel-bar-overs." This book is presently at the publishers. She is gathering material on this journey for a sequel to her first publication.

Last year Dolph had anemia and could not make the trip by foot; "the sunshine and open air cured him and this year I have not had to push him at all. He has made every mile of the way by foot and never complains of being tired," Mrs. St. Claire said. The first thing Mrs. St. Claire did when she was greeted by your reporter was to complain of the deplorable condition of the tarred sidewalks on the bridge. This, Mrs. St. Claire added, was the first time they had any trouble with the roads during their entire trip.

DISCUSS PHILOSOPHY
This tiny grandmother of two, dressed in shorts, and her son, who is just as sunburned as his mother and who has long blond hair, discuss philosophy and recte poetry to each other during their journey. Mrs. St. Claire said "Dolphy is just a born genius." He has invented a motor to be attached to her xylophone, and it plays by itself.

They do not accept rides from drivers on the highways, but they do accept invitations from people to stay in their homes overnight; if they do not receive an invitation of this kind they just stay in tourist courts. They are financing this trip which is taking them only on the highways. They do not detour and go through the town's center.

The most they have ever walked in a day's time is from twenty to twenty-three miles. They generally average sixteen to seventeen miles a day.

They will not walk back to Jacksonville from New Orleans, the trip will take too long, and Dolph must enter the third grade in a Jacksonville school.

I will convey only such title as is vested in me as Trustee, but I believe the title to be good.
This the 10th day of July, 1950.
GRAYSON B. KEATON
Trustee.

Chicks, Vegetables Earn Living For Louis C. Lee, Leetown Truck Farmer

Louis C. Lee, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Earl McNeese and Howard Simmons, County Agent, look over Mr. Lee's flock of 2005 chicks.

Poultry raising and trucking produce into Poyune have enabled Louis C. Lee of Leetown to earn his livelihood and provide his family with a comfortable living.

Mr. Lee became interested in poultry when he heard the success stories of many who entered this field around Jackson, the home of his son-in-law, Earl McNeese.

PURCHASES FLOCK
This enterprising truck farmer purchased 2039 chicks from the Barnett Hatchery in Jackson, Mississippi, today he has 2005 chicks left. On May 16, at the age of six weeks, they averaged 2 1/2 pounds per bird.

Mr. Lee waters and feeds his poultry three times a day, this takes about two hours of his time. There's no difficulty in raising chickens, it can be done in a person's spare time, and the only results will be an additional profit at the end of the year.

The cost of raising this group of chickens to the age of six weeks was $260., the initial cost of the birds, plus $565, the cost of feed. As this is his first batch of chickens, Mr. Lee, expects to make back the capital investment from the profit of his first flock. He expected to keep the birds until they were eight weeks old and each weighed three pounds.

Feeding and watering the chickens are not the only angles in this business. The flock must be properly housed with equipment necessary to care for them. Mr. Lee has built a 100 foot house set in a picturesque pecan grove which provides shade throughout the day. It is divided into two sections with approximately one thousand chickens in each section. The house and equipment cost $590.

In constructing his poultry house, this energetic and capable farmer, cut timber growing on his property, skinned it and used it as rafters; this enabled him to save on the cost of materials.

To cut down on feeding expenses, Mr. Lee has thirteen acres planted in corn. When this corn is ready, it will be fed to the chickens. The feed bill will be automatically reduced.

Poultry and truck farming make up his livelihood. Mr. Lee has an 80 acre farm with 16 acres in cultivation. He grows beans, tomatoes, peppers, beets and peas and brings them into Poyune for marketing.

Life on a farm can be profitable if the owners are wide-awake to every advantage of saving a penny here, and another there. Mr. and Mrs. Lee are wide-awake.

Mrs. Lee cans vegetables grown on the farm; this cuts the cost of her groceries in half. They have to buy little manufactured produce from the grocer. Her canned goods pantry is stocked with turnips, tomatoes, peas, snap beans, jellies, meats, blackberries, blackberry jam, peaches, pickles, red beans and corn.

Mrs. Lee cans anywhere from 250 to 400 jars of produce a year for the four members of her family. She has figured that it only takes a garden of a 1/4 acre to feed she and her husband and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Earl McNeese. Also living at the Lee's is their grandchild who is only a few months old.

Though not working on a large scale, Mr. Lee is able to provide a comfortable living for his family; it is small farms like this that provide the fundamentals for every day needs.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Here's a
"Shining Example"

Seems like every youngster in town was down in front of the F.B.W. Home last Saturday morning having fluorescent tape put on the back fender of his bicycle by Smiley Roberts, our local post commander. "Real post shines in the dark," says Smiley. "When a car's headlights hit this tape at night, it reflects right back to you—even at distances where you wouldn't notice the bike itself. With just this little extra effort on our part, we're protecting both the drivers and youngsters in town from accidents."

I want to congratulate the vets on this example of public spirit.

Community Volunteering, you might call it—for the common good. Like the way the beer retailers voluntarily co-operate with the Brewers' Self-Regulation Program whereby their places are carefully kept clean and bright and law-abiding—for the public's benefit.

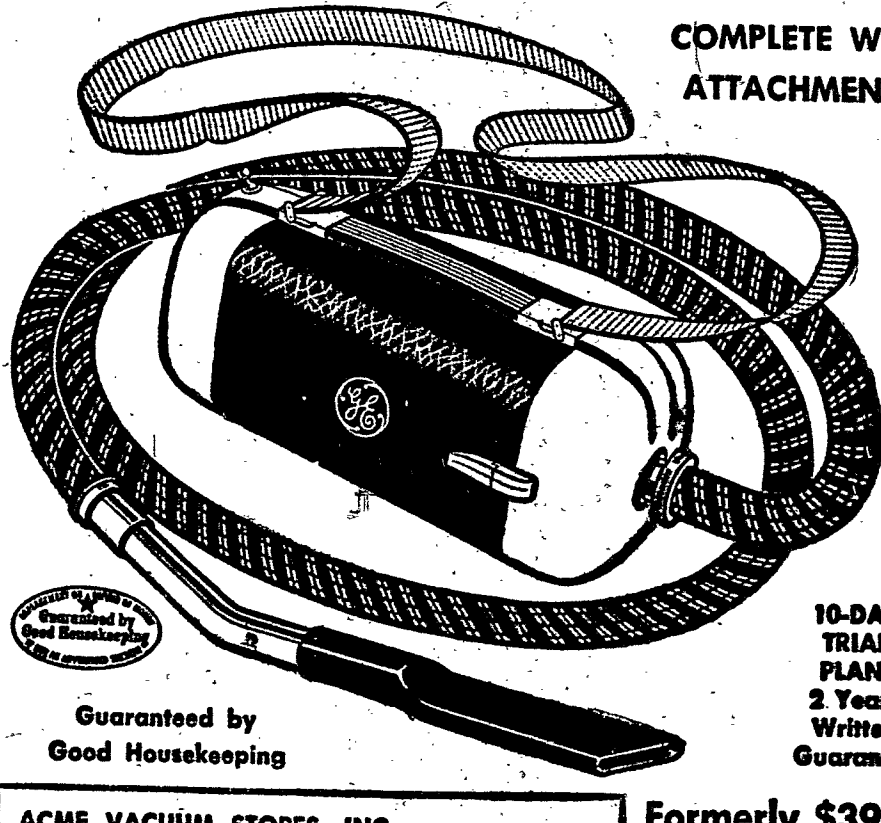

From where I sit, it pays to follow the time-tested rule of "Safety First."

It's Hard To Believe ...

That one day this property was worth approximately $10, per acre to its owner, and now, thanks to some careless passerby, its value has decreased considerably and is now almost worthless from the timberman's point of view.

Fire went through this land and destroyed from 1200 to 1500 seedlings per acre. This little act of carelessness cost the owner about $10, per acre. Forty acres were burned causing a loss of approximately $400.

In time, if this property had remained unharmed, this land would have meant cash in the owner's pocket; timber is worth money, and people should realize that this industry in Hancock County is vital. Carelessness will gradually kill off all seedlings and timber that might mean the future growth and development of Hancock County's forests and timber industry.

Take care when you are near the forest—do not drop matches or cigarettes unless you are sure they are put out. Every match or cigarette you drop carelessly is another step toward the death of industry in Hancock County.

Jimmy Attaya of Picayune Pilots Helicopter Millsaps Adds For Geological Survey In North Mississippi New Buildings

University, Miss., July 14—The mysteries of Mother Earth's structure, at least in the Mississippi region, are about to be laid bare as a result of the air age.

Dr. William C. Morse, state geologist and chairman of the University of Mississippi Department of Geology, has acquired a helicopter for studying the terrain all over the state. It's the latest thing in up-to-date methods of geological exploration. In fact, it's so new, the idea as yet has not been adopted by other regions.

THE COPTER

The 'copter, which is based at Ole Miss, is a Kaman "rotorcraft," which stays aloft and is propelled along by its two 38-foot counter-rotating and intermeshing rotors. This is also the latest thing in helicopters, since it eliminates the tail rotor commonly used. The top rotors are wing and propeller for the whole machine.

Three-passenger aircraft weighs 1900 pounds, carries 40 gallons of gas and will stay aloft nearly three hours with that gas load. It is powered with a 225-horsepower engine that pushes it along at up to 73 miles per hour, but it cruises at around 60 miles per hour.

USED IN GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

The machine was purchased by the State Geological Survey. It will be used first in a study of the Holly Springs and formations in the northern part of the state in an effort to find structural traps which prevented the escape of oil thousands of years ago when stream beds broke through and permitted some of the oil present to escape.

In addition to this survey, the copter will be used for other stratigraphic mapping, studying mineral and rock outcroppings, and tracing land formations, a program which otherwise might have taken years. "In the first ten minutes we were up the other day, we saw outcrops we didn't know existed, and they're only a few miles from the campus," said Dr. Morse.

"For many years past," the state geologist continues, "we have been forced to explore the formations in the state on foot, since some of the areas are inaccessible by jeep." This walking study, Dr. Morse feels, has not only been slow, but has not been as accurate as it could have been. "We have made exhaustive studies on one side of a structure," he recalls, "only to find ourselves confronted with a huge ditch or high barbed-wire fence right in the middle of the structure."

"NO PROBLEM"

With the helicopter, the Ole Miss scientist figures these man-made and natural obstacles will be no problem. "We'll just jump over the ditch or the fence." If necessary, the plane can hover above the formation while the geologist locates it on an aerial photograph.

The young man who will pilot the copter, Jimmy Attaya of Picayune, is a geological engineering graduate student. He never flew a ship in his life until he went to Windsor Locks, Conn., to try this one. As a matter of fact, there are no CAA regulations for a man who wants to fly only a helicopter. So he took the regular nine hours of dual time before he soloed, and when he received his license became the only man in the country, as far as anyone knows, who is privileged to fly a helicopter only.

ON HIS OWN

Jimmy flew the ship down from Connecticut with Raymond A. Walker of the Kaman Company. Mr. Walker was also his instructor at Windsor Locks. But from now on he's on his own, and lest North Missisippians fear the grasshopper plague has arrived, they can be advised that it's only Dr. Morse and Jimmy Attaya out on a field-trip.

FUSARIUM WILT SERIOUS PROBLEM IN COMMERCIAL CANNING AREAS; DISEASE RESISTANT STRAIN SOUGHT IN BREEDING PROJECT

State College, Miss.—Control of wilt, a serious disease of cowpeas in the commercial canning areas of the state, is the objective of a study being conducted by the Mississippi Experiment Station.

The disease is soil borne and after it becomes established it cannot be controlled by treating, spraying or dusting since the fungus enters the roots of the growing plants from the soil. Fusarium wilt may be recognized by yellowing, wilting and drooping of the leaves and by an enlargement of the lower stem and upper root which is streaked with a pink to reddish color. The plant generally dies quickly after the first symptoms but may survive and produce some fruit.

Dr. W. W. Hare, Experiment Station pathologist, is seeking to develop a strain of cowpeas resistant to Fusarium wilt. Last year he obtained a wide variety of seed from dealers and Experiment Stations throughout the country and planted 60 seed to each strain in a wilt infested field.

Wilt records were taken first about 3½ weeks after planting and every 2 weeks thereafter until maturity. At maturity of the later varieties all plants were dug and the tap root and lower stem sliced and examined for signs of the fungus.

Nearly all plants of the Brown Sugar Crowder variety died with wilt before reaching the blossom stage, Dr. Hare reported. The remainder of this variety, which is the predominate variety grown in the commercial canning areas of Mississippi, died before producing fruit except for an occasional plant of a distinctly different type which probably resulted from a mixture in the seed.

Brabham, planted as a resistant check variety, averaged 4.2 per cent wilt.

"In these strictly preliminary results from the first year's test, variation in wilt reaction between different samples of the same variety was found," Dr. Hare reported. "This makes recommendation of specific varieties for wilt resistance difficult. In general, however, the Blackeye, Black Crowder, and the speckled field pea types are more resistant and the Crowder, particularly Brown Sugar Crowder, and Lady-pea types more susceptible."

A $600,000 building program in for a year now is fast making Millsaps College in Jackson one of the best housed and best-equipped small colleges in the South.

The new buildings will make a total of 22 on the campus. Just 50 years ago in 1900, the eight-year old school had five buildings, one of those the president's home.

The biggest project of the program is the new Christian Center building in the center of the campus between Murrah hall and Burton Hall facing Northwest Street. A dream of the college administrators for many years, the beautiful new building has already cost $30,000 and the overall cost, according to President M. L. Smith, will be one-third of a million dollars.

The new building is built around an auditorium with a seating capacity of 1,012, the largest in the city next to the Municipal auditorium. The stage is as large as the municipal stage.

The left wing of the center will house the Department of Religion which includes Dr. Bond Fleming, Dr. J. D. Wooten, Jr., and Professor R. S. Smith, on the faculty. A special feature will be the John Rundle and John Chambers Memorial Religion Library dedicated by the young people of the Mississippi and North Mississippi conferences of the Methodist church. Chambers and Rundle were both Millsaps students who died in the recent war.

The right wing of the building is for student activity offices including especially new space for school publication, the Purple and White, weekly paper, and the Bobashela, yearbook.

Also in this wing will be the school chapel to accommodate 100 people. A Wurliitzer organ has already been donated for use in the special services. This chapel will be one of the religious beauty spots of the state when it is completed," said Dr. Smith.

Special attention was called to the double row of steps leading from the Christian Center. These are a gift of R. L. Ezelle, prominent Jacksonian and president of the Board of trustees of the college.

The second important building going up is the $160,000 girl's dormitory, Sanders Hall. The building which will house 56 girls, will be connected with Whitworth Hall, girl's dormitory, as will another building of the same type which is planned in the future. Sanders Hall, named after R. D. Sander who donated the largest of the funds, will feature a spacious apartment for the matron and a switchboard to handle calls in both dormitories.

A third building going up on the campus is the Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity house to accommodate 24 to 36 students. This $40,000 building will be on the corner of what is now Trailer-ville.

The first main project of the Greater Millsaps plan has been completed. This is the new roadway through the campus with more parking space to the gymnasium and golf course, it has been paved.

A new $40,000 president's home has been completed on the west side of the campus and the former

GI Training "Cut Off" On July 25, 1951

Most veterans actually must have started their G. I. courses by July 25, 1951, if they want to continue afterwards. A mere application for training made on or before the deadline will not do.

So ruled the Veterans Administration in a recent decision of the Administrator of Veterans Affairs, numbered 844.

The VA regulation, according to the decision, is based upon the G. I. Bill itself, which states that a veteran's course "shall be initiated not later than four years after either the date of his discharge or the termination of the present war, whichever is later."

The war was declared terminated on July 25, 1947 for certain purposes, including educational and training; hence the 1951 cut-off date for most veterans.

The law apparently uses the word "initiated," the decision states, "in its ordinary acceptance which according to any standard dictionary means 'to begin.'" The VA regulation merely follows this definition in requiring a veteran to begin his G. I. Bill course by deadline time.

VA'S INTERPRETATION CORRECT

A glance at the legislative history of the G. I. Bill would reveal that VA's interpretation of the word is the correct one, the decision points out.

The version of the G. I. Bill that passed the Senate on March 24, 1944 (S. 1787) stated that veterans would be "required to complete the course of instruction chosen by them, beginning not later than two years after the date of discharge or release from active duty or two years after the date of termination of the present war, whichever is later."

(The VA decision supplied the underlining.) The Senate's report on the bill amplified this provision by explaining that "such course shall begin not later than two years after..." (understanding supplied).

The House of Representatives rewrote the Senate Bill and passed a version that contained the language of the present act. "That such course shall be initiated not later than two years..."

A House Committee report accompanying this bill pointed out that despite the difference in language the intent was the same as in the Senate bill. According to the House report, "a limitation is provided that (the veteran) must enter a selected course not later than two years after discharge."

hope of the president remodeled into four modern apartment for faculty members. Two other entirely new faculty apartments of four units each have been completed earlier.

Dr. Smith announced that though it has not affected the college for the enrollment still stands at between 800 and 850. At one time shortly after the war, 500 veterans were enrolled. This coming fall, only about 75 are expected. There are no present plans for accommodating more than about 850 students, said Dr. Smith, for the small enrollment is the main thing that allows the college to make its excellent educational contributions.

The two bills went to conference and a protracted deadlock ensued, the VA decision recounts. Finally, differences between the two versions were ironed out and an entirely new draft was prepared.

LIST DIFFERENCES

The conference committee issued a report listing the differences between the Senate and House bills, but the list contained no reference to the cut-off date for commencing training. The report merely pointed out that the wording of the House version was retained in the new draft.

"The legislative history, therefore," the decision concludes, "leaves no possible doubt that it is the course itself which must be begun within the period specified by the act."

An amendment to the original G. I. Bill, incidentally changed the deadline for starting courses from two years to four years after discharge or the end of the war, whichever is later.

"OLE MISS" WINDS UP FIRST SUMMER TERM

University, Miss., July 10—University of Mississippi students wind up the first term of the summer session Friday and Saturday when they literally "sweat out" final examinations.

Registration for the second term of the session will get under way Monday, with classes slated to begin Tuesday. The last day for registration, according to Acting Registrar Robert Ellis, is July 17.

The first term will end without commencement exercises, since those students who complete the requirements for degrees this six weeks will be awarded the degrees at Commencement August 18. Approximately 450 students are expected to receive degrees in August, according to Mr. Ellis. Of these, approximately 175 are graduate students.

In addition to regular registration for courses, the second term will also include the Gulf Coast Art School, which begins July 25, at the Gulf Hills Hotel in Ocean Springs. As part of the art school, which will have as its major instructor Fred Conway, internationally recognized artist, there will also be conducted an art education workshop, July 25—August 11, under the direction of Mrs. Jane Calloway, nationally known figure in the field of art education.

Other workshops to be held during the second term include a social studies workshop which begins July 11 and ends August 1; a workshop for school administrators in health and physical education, July 10-28; and a guidance workshop, July 11-August 1, which will include in its curriculum a concentrated study of guidance in the areas of immediate need in the schools of those enrolling.

The social studies workshop, which is devoted primarily to giving teachers of the social studies the relationship between their courses and current events, has as its primary theme the air age and the social studies. The guidance workshop will include in its faculty specialists in that field from all over the nation, the state, and communities.

No - Belief in God Is NOT Enough!

Many people are risking their eternal salvation on a "religion" of their own... which is actually no religion at all.

"Oh, I believe in God," they say, "but I don't go to church. I'm just not the religious type."

Almost everybody, of course, believes that there is a God. Common sense tells us that this is so. But if we actually believe there is a God, should not this same common sense tell us we must do something about it? And how can we give expression to our belief in God... through religion?

Religion is simply the consequence of our realization of Who God is. It is our striving to be honest and consistent with this knowledge—to learn and fulfill our duties to our Creator.

Catholics believe that God created us for a definite purpose... He gave us the intelligence to recognize what that purpose is—and the means to fulfill it. It is through our religion that we give evidence of our desire to honor and serve God. It is through religion that we approach God in faith, repentance, love and gratitude.

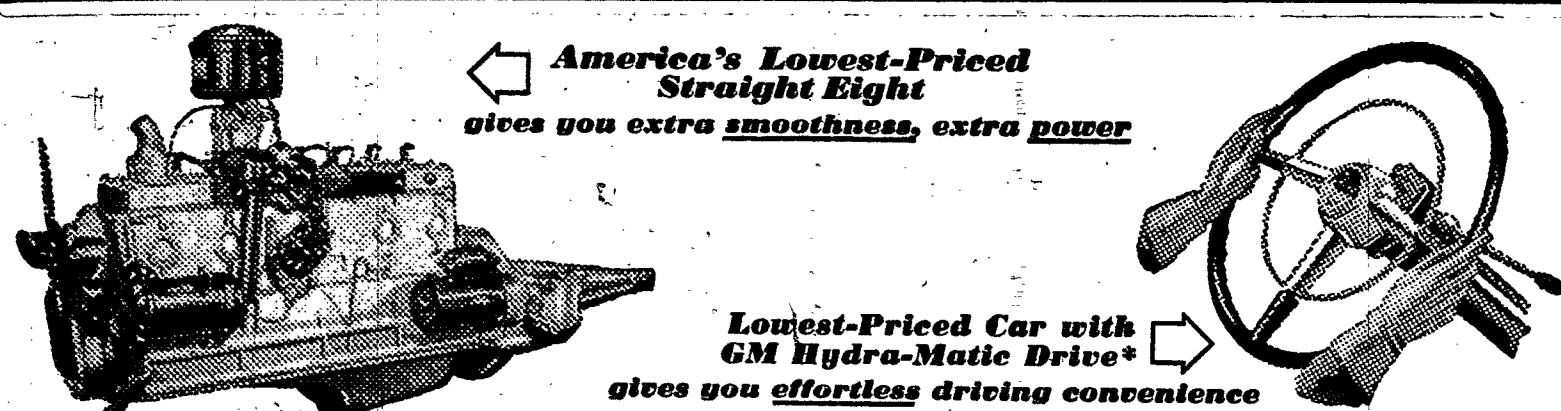

If you are living in the belief that you don't need religion... that you have to do is to believe in God and live a moral life... we urge you to ask yourself these questions—NOW: "Why am I living? Why did God create Me?" The most elementary common sense answer is that you are living because God created you... and that God has a purpose in doing so. Catholics believe it is our duty to find out what God's plan is for our lives—and do our best to live it.

Free If you have been living without any deep religious convictions... it will pay you to read a specially prepared pamphlet which we will send you without cost or obligation. It discusses such questions as: Can the truth of Christianity be proved? Is it honest to ignore religion? Is science, ethics or education a substitute for the Church? Also other topics that should concern you deeply. For free copy write today and ask for Pamphlet No. KC-18.

COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES

Employ Safety First When Handling Poisons

By Howard F. Simmons

POISON SAFETY

Think of your own safety when handling insect poisons. All of the recommended dusting and spray materials are poisonous, and some are toxic to man.

Follow the simple precautions listed to avoid possible harmful effects. Do not open insecticide containers in closed rooms. Be careful not to breathe fumes from concentrated sprays, and avoid as far as possible breathing the diluted materials.

Wear gloves when handling concentrates and wash your hands frequently.

Follow field operations, or any work in which your clothes become saturated or contaminated, with a bath and complete change of clothes.

Where antidiates are known to be effective, as with parathion, carry them when using the chemicals, or keep them easily available.

WATCH FOR COCCIDIOSIS
Poultry producers should be constantly on the lookout for Coccidiosis. This disease may strike in the broilers or in the replacement stock, ruining plans for marketing quality broilers or for placing the most vigorous pullets in the laying house this fall.

Tests at Brown Loam Branch Experiment Station Show No Advantage For Hay Stacked In Paddocks of Winter Grazing Oats

State College, Miss.—Lepesdeza hay fed to steers grazing on winter oats failed to increase beef gains in tests recently completed at the Brown Loam Branch Experiment Station at Oakley.

Twenty-two steers used in winter grazing experiments had access to excellent quality Kobe lespedeza hay stacked in the paddocks where the steers were being wintered on oat grazing. A similar number of steers grazed oats throughout the winter without having hay available. The grazing tests began November 11 and extended through May 20. Eight 6-acre plots of uniform soil type were used in the study.

GAIN WITHOUT HAY
Steers on the oat pasture alone averaged 413 pounds each at the beginning of the test and gained an average of 283 pounds during the grazing period. Steers which had access to lespedeza hay in addition to oat grazing weighed an average of 416 pounds when the test began and gained 267 pounds.

Thus the steers which had no hay actually gained a little more, an average of 16 pounds each, than those which had hay. The average daily gains for the two groups of steers were 1.51 pounds with hay and 1.61 pounds without it.

Use of the hay made no apparent difference in the prevalence of scours among the cattle, reported Ray H. Means, superintendent of the Brown Loam Branch Experiment Station. All steers were affected with this condition for the first five to eight weeks they were on oats regardless of whether they had hay or not. There was no advantage in carrying capacity with hay stacks where ample oat forage was available, Mr. Means said. In fact only a small amount of each stack was eaten by the steers.

Experiment Station Studies Irrigation Of Corn, Pastures

FIFTEEN ACRES OF CORN BEING GROWN IN IRRIGATION EXPERIMENT: PASTURE WORK CARRIED ON IN PLOTS

State College, Miss.—Widespread interest in irrigation in Mississippi and throughout the Southeast has prompted the Mississippi Agricultural Experiment Station to begin a study of supplemental irrigation of corn, pastures and forage crops.

A field of 15 acres of corn, with 9,000 to 11,000 plants per acre, has been fertilized with 200 pounds of nitrogen, 80 pounds of K2O and 120 pounds of P2O5 per acre. Ten acres were planted on April 27 and the remainder on May 25. The purpose of this unit is to study the cost of irrigation on irregular fields and to determine the feasibility of irrigating corn under these field conditions.

Plot research is being conducted on corn pasture and forage crops in order to get an accurate control of stands, fertility level, and amounts of water applied. These plots will furnish data on the most economical levels of fertility and plant population per acre to be used with and without supplemental irrigation. Instruments have been installed in each irrigated and non-irrigated block to reveal moisture condition in the soil in order to determine when the corn should be irrigated.

Replicated pasture plots will receive different fertilizer treatments during the summer. Different rates and kinds of fertilizer will be applied to plots with native grasses and clovers. Other plots will receive the same fertilizer treatments but will be overseeded—some with White Dutch clover and others with Louisiana clover. Blocks of these randomized plots will receive supplementary irrigation while other blocks will not be irrigated.

Tests on forage crops following oats will be conducted with and without irrigation.

Your State Health Officer Says

Where county, state and Federal Governments give adequate support to public health departments, as has been the case in the venereal disease control the results are astounding. In Chicago, Illinois the number of new cases of syphilis is dropping at such a rate that infectious cases of this killing disease will have practically disappeared from that city as a public health problem by 1955. This is true in Mississippi not only in syphilis control, but malaria as well as funds are forthcoming to keep up the fight. Typhoid is no longer a major health problem. The same may be said about pellagra and diphtheria. Shall we keep on keeping on or grow careless and penurious?

Use Height - Weight System In Buying Children's Clothes

By MISS MADGE ALLRED

For a long time mothers, grandmothers and others who buy children's clothing have known that the sizes and age of the child don't match. One child who's four takes size six, while another who's four takes a size three.

To help solve this problem, use is now being made of a system based on size rather than age. It's called a height-weight system.

When you go to the store to buy clothing for a child, all you need to know is his height and weight. Age doesn't matter. You can tell from the height-weight chart on the label which garment will fit.

Manufacturers have different trade names for this system, but the labels all have this height-weight chart. This system helps retailers who find it expensive to handle returned garments. It will do away with much of the waste of parent's time and money from garments that do not fit but which cannot be returned.

Almost all of us have at some time bought a toy for a child rather than clothes as a gift just because we had no way of knowing how to buy a garment that would fit.

Is the garment suitable for your child's activities and temperament? An independent child likes clothes he can put on and take off himself without help from mother. Choose simple clothes, but colorful ones, that are free of extra belts and trimmings.

A nursery school is now experimenting with various sized buttons as part of a study on suitable children's clothing. They have already found that large, vertical buttonholes bound in contrasting colors are easiest for a child to manage.

The mother who gets the most for her money is the one whose children like their clothes and wear them. Clothes laid aside because the children don't find them comfortable or because they are unsuitable in some way are the moneywasters. Watch the child at play and select clothing that will not hamper him in his favorite activities.

Will the clothing be easy to care for and durable?

Don't be enticed into something you won't want to wash and iron often. With more outdoor play, especially during the summer, clothes get harder wear, so look for durability.

A good many of the facts concerning ease of care and durability are on the labels. Check on shrinkage and color fastness, both in washing and in sunlight. Look for buttons and fasteners that will go through the washing machine or dry cleaning. Be sure any other trimmings won't fade. Finishes should be permanent. For instance, a water repellent finish should go through washing or dry cleaning.

Are the places getting the greatest wear and strain reinforced?

The American Home Economics Association just finished a survey on what consumers want in children's socks. Good reinforcements, particularly with nylon, were high on the list.

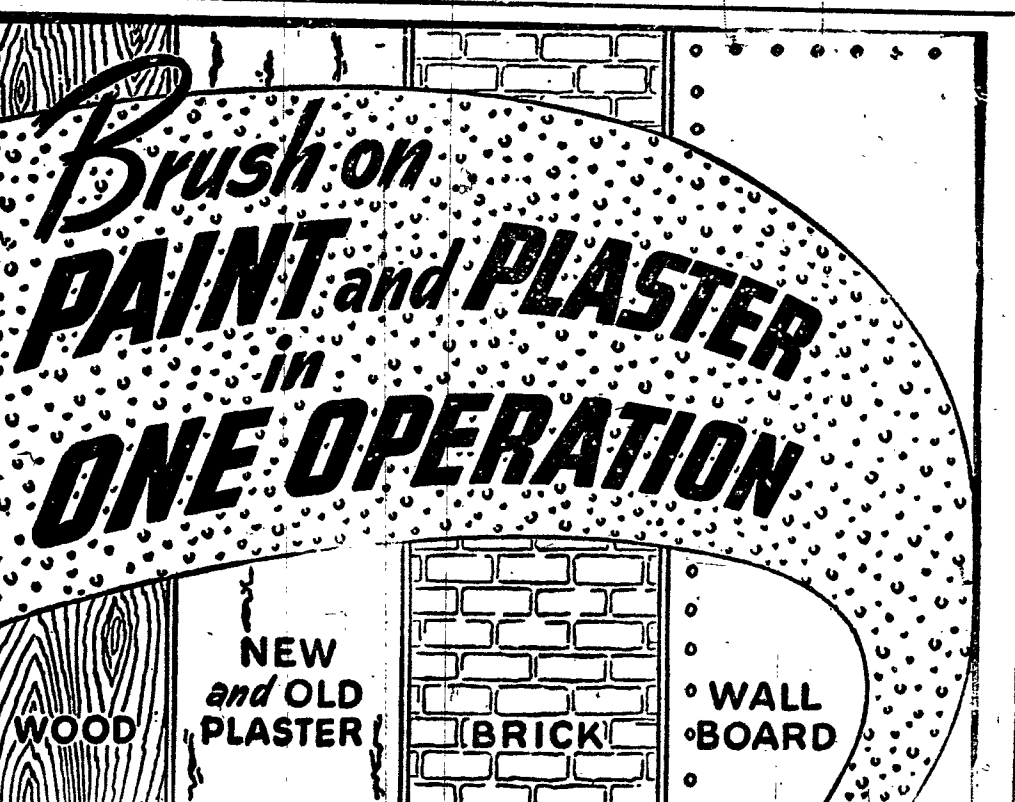

Can the clothes be let down?

Usually garments with these special features are in the higher price ranges; but they do exist, and many mothers consider them economical buys.
